LOS ANGELES — With the 984 Summer Games now over, Olympic officials will be turning their attention to the boycotts that have marred the last three Games. Their deliberations in the coming months will be serious, and many observers are asking whether the world Olympic movement has reached a turning point.

Juan Antonio Samaranch, president of the International Olympie Committee, will go to Moscow on Sept. 3 for a meeting to which more than 60 countries have been invited. Mr. Lewis later said that, if the an aide. platform language went beyond Mr. Reagan's statement, "the president would have to repudiate the platform.

Mr. Lott also rejected the idea that the Reagan statement was a "We're obviously working with the administration and we want a platform the president will feel comfortable with, he said. "But the language we adopt depends on what the delegates think. It represents not just the president, but rank-and-file Republicans."

Mr. Kemp predicted that his side would win the platform committee fight. But Senator Robert J. Dole of Kansas, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, said, "Some of us are trying to protect the president, even if other people have an agenda of their own." Presidential strategists say that a pledge barring a tax increase under any circumstances lacks credibility. And Mr. Reagan said as much Sunday in a statement that contained the text of a question-and-answer session between the president and

Asked whether he would absolutely rule out the possibility of a tax increase, Mr. Reagan said: "A president of the United States should never say never, but a tax increase has always been for me a last resort. My opponent has spent his political life supporting more taxes and more spending. For him, raising taxes is a first resort. For me, it is a last resort."

The president's 19-day vacation, due to end Wednesday, has been marked by what his managers consider a period of drift, particularly on the tax issue.

Conversely, he said, "after prolonged unemployment, the young people don't want to work. They idjust to unemployment."

Also, his field studies show, unemployed youth come from homes where the fathers are now unemployed, increasing the prospect of a sort of underclass of youth where traditional work values become undermined. In 1980, about 4 percent of the fathers of youngsters interviewed were out of work, but by 1982, he said, the number had grown to 15 percent.

Pravda, the Communist Party paper, said that "crusading oationalism" fostered by the United States had replaced the Olympic ideal of international friendship.

Led by the Soviet Union, 14 Communist countries boycotted the Los Angeles Games on the ground that the safety of their ath-letes could not be guaranteed. Soviet television and radio provided only sparse coverage of the Olympics, and no films of the events were shown on television.

Prayda said that air pollution in Los Angeles had added physical stress to the psychological pressure felt by non-U.S. athletes. It mentioned the collapse of Steve Overt, the British world record-holder in the 1,500 meters, as an example of the effects of smog.

Tass said the atmosphere at Los Angeles was so jingoistic that it seemed more like a prolonged 4th of July celebration than an international competition. "The boom of commercial activity was the only thing that was up to the intensity of the deliberately stirred-up chauvin-istic passions," Tass concluded.

Mr. Samaranch, by contrast, has mestioned publicly whether the Olympic movement in its present form could survive another boy-cott. And while not explicitly contmitted to a policy of sanctions, he has hinted that he favors some sort of punishment, perhaps along the lines of barring boycotting countries from the next Games.

"The purpose of national Olympic committees is to develop and seed teams to the Olympic Games," the IOC president declared after arriving in Los Angeles. "If they don't, perhaps they should be punished in some way." The Lausanne meeting will be preceded by preparatory gather-ings the week before it convenes. In the past these have frequently succeeded in channeling matters to-ward a decision desired by the leadership, and open discussion has sometimes been stifled.

But, Lord Killanin added. "The members of the IOC have to look carefully at this question. If it is done, it will hurt athletes....It is very hard to compel people to go to the Games." The Russians and other Eastern Bloc members of the Olympic community have already come out against sanctions. Instead, Soviet representatives have delicately put forward another proposal; that national Olympic committees be brought into the process of select-

And Sir Lance Cross declared: "It would defeat the whole purpose of the Olympic movement, of spreading the Olympics to all areas. The members as a whole must be free, by majority vote to choose the sites they want." A proposal often heard from outside the IOC, but almost never ecutive director, was asked last from inside it, is that a permanent neutral site be chosen for the Games. The one most frequently mentioned is Greece.

There appears, however, no prospect of this proposal being adopted. The consensus is that Greece is not a suitable permanent site because of its wide ideological swings from right to left, its civil war and recent rule by a military junta, and its poor relations with Turkey.

Russians and Germans

The last time East Germany got into a is now well beyond the level of ripples, as the public argument with the Soviet Union, in invective in the official press demonstrates. 1971, the issue was detente. The Soviets wanted to move several degrees toward better relations with the West; Walter Ulbricht, the elderly Stalinist who ran East Germany, was reasting and making trouble for them. The Soviets solved it by removing Mr. Ulbricht and replacing him with Erich Honecker.

Now the Honecker government is hard at work on its own initiative improving its connections with West Germany, and it is moving at a speed that has evidently raised in the Soviets' minds a terrible doubt about whether they are fully in control of events there.

In 1971 the negotiations were broadly be-tween East and West. The Soviet Union and the United States, dealing directly with each other, were setting the terms in which other discussions proceeded among Europeans. This time it is just the opposite. While the atmosphere has deteriorated between the Soviets and the Americans, it has warmed remarkably between the two Germanys. In each, the government has its own reasons for wishing to demonstrate that its purposes are not wholly determined by its larger ally.

That creates ripples of uneasiness in the West, as people wonder where this interesting process is leading. In the East, the uneasiness

It was the Soviets who began this process of playing on the ties between the two Germanys.

with the thought of gradually drawing the Federal Republic away from NATO. Things have not worked out that way, and the present activity among the Germans catches the Soviets at a bad time. Their campaign against the emplacement of the NATO missiles was unsuccessful, and they are oow evidently trying to reorganize their European policy. Meanwhile the various contradictory things they have said about missiles, both NATO's and their own, appear to have rattled people more severely in Eastern Europe than in the West

Perhaps it is an exaggeration to call the political situation in Moscow an interregrum, but the inconsistencies among Soviet state-ments hint that no one person is fully in charge of policy on this most sensitive of subjects. A debate of substantial dimensions seems to be going on. The West Germans have invited Mr. Honecker to visit his boyhood home in the Saarland oext month. He would be the first East German leader to visit West Germany. Whether the visit actually takes place will be a crucial indicator of the latitude the Soviets are prepared to extend to the East Germans.

Some Censor Concerts

The point of international cultural exchange, we thought, was to display a national culture at its best. That purpose was betrayed by the New York Philharmonic when it initially agreed to eliminate a piece from a planned concert program in Malaysia because the mu-sic had "Jewish elements." After a chorus of criticism, the Philharmonic decided to do the right thing and cancel the Malaysian concerts rather than submit to censorship.

Malaysia, a predominantly Moslem country, has an official policy banning the presentation of "works of Jewish origin." The Malaysian ear is indeed discriminating. It can tolerate works by such American Jewish composers as Leonard Bernstein, Aaron Copland, and George Gershwin, but cannot accept a piece by Ernest Bloch entitled "Schelomo," or Solomon. In truth, the problem appears to be less the music than its unabashed subtitle: "A Hebrew Rhapsody for Cello and Orchestra." For the orchestra to bend its standards to such bigotry would have been truly tasteless.

What justification could there be for an American cultural institution to accommodate such rank cultural censorship? To do this in the name of representing American culture abroad would only have compounded the offense.

Malaysia's government is not alone in trying to restrict what its citizens can see an targets, and Jewish artists are not alone as targets. From South Africa to the Soviet Union, ideological and ethnic tests are all too common.

The only proper answer to such cultural censorship is a principled refusal to go along. The point was well made a few years ago by cone other than Zubin Mehta, music director of the Israel Philharmonic as well as the New York Philharmonic, who challenged an Israeli ban on playing the works of Richard Wagner, the German composer much favored by Hitler.

Art, diplomacy, and decency are best served by the answer the New York Philharmonie finally gave to Malaysia: Accept the universality of culture, or lose the concert.

- THE NEW YORK TIMES.

The Germanys: Trying Reunification on the Sly . . .

LONDON — The superpowers have at last found common ground. Each is worried about The German Problem.

The Kremlin, or at least its ultra-hawk faction, has been assailing the moves taken by East Germany to improve relations with the Germans on the other side of the Iron Curtain. Io the past year 27,000 East Germans have been given permission to move West; next month the East German leader, Erich Honecker, is planning that puppet state's first visit to the prosperous side of Germany.

Moscow originally approved of this ap-proach to the West, as part of its campaign to seduce Europe into rejecting the American-made nuclear missiles. When that seduction failed and West Germany began to put in place the West's answer to the huge escalation of Russian arms, Moscow expected East Ger-many to fall into its new hard line — the present supersulk that is supposed to help defeat Ronald Reagan in November.

But the East Germans, normally most subservient to orders from Moscow, are pressing ahead with their Western contacts, testing the limits of Soviet ire or exploiting a divisioo in the Kremlin's constantly moribund inner circle. The Soviet leaders suspect that the East and West Germans are plotting "revanchism"

By William Safire

a movement to restore the old German borders and take back areas that the Russians chopped off after World War II.

Meanwhile, back in Washington, the State and Commerce Departments are trying to get a grip on The German Problem: the near-billion-dollar credits extended by West Germany to the Communist regime in the east. and the trans-shipment of the most sophisticated American technology to East Germany.

Two years ago, while the State Department was caving in to European demands that U.S. equipment be used in the Sovict-European gas pipeline, America was assured that West Germans would guard against the transfer of U.S. industrial secrets to the Communist bloc. But it turns out that Secretary George Shultz was snookered; the West Germans are now preparing laws to forbid their companie from going along with U.S. export restric-tions. Thus. West Germany sticks its thumb in the eye of the Western superpower (which only a conservative, NATO-dutiful govern-ment could do), while East Germany apparently sticks its thumb in the eye of the Eastern superpower (which only a staunchly Communist, repressive regime could do).

Why are these events taking place at the same time? The answer should be obvious: 40. years after the war, two generations after the division of the Third Reich by the victorious allies, German leaders of East and West are beginning to put on the pressure to reunite their country. Nobody wants to admit this, of course. Germans talk only of "ultimate" reunification in some happy time of universal peace, because they know that the very prospect of one Germany soon erodes their credibility as allies to opposing sides.

The Russians, if this goes too far, will crack down on East Germany as they did on Poland; 20 Russian divisions are present on East German soil. The Americans, if Chancellor Helmut Kohl continues to finance and technologically bolster the Communist regime, will react by passing the Nunn amendme and the withdrawal of U.S. forces will began That is why East Germans are talking to Moscow merely of detente, which is occusionally in favor, and why West Germans talk to America of the virtues of trade and human communication, which Americans are usually for. Their game is to begin the reunification process without ever calling it that.

German nationalism seems to mean more to Mr. Honecker than continued subservience to Moscow, and more to Mr. Kohl than the present generation's method of defending Western Europe. A decade from now we will learn of the secret negotiations in these years that took place between Germans who put Fatherland ahead of ideology. It should not be a surprise; it is only natural.

Would a reunited, neutralist Germany be a useful buffer between superpowers - or a way for the Russians to get the Americans out of Europe? Would it revive the nationalist spirit that led to two world wars? Bom's leaders are deluding themselves. The public irritation that Moscow is showing at the irreased contact may be deceptive. Reunified, Germany would be stripped of its Western protection. It would be at the mercy of the superpower that is unafraid to impose its will.

Or Just Another Maneuver Along the Eastern Front?

B RUSSELS — Can there be anything new on the Eastern front? The current quarrel between the Soviet Union and East Germany might be preparing a Communist bloc crisis.

Or it might be just another routine spat in a "family of nations" that is less united than some would like it to appear.

"This war," Stalin told Tito in 1945, "is unlike the wars of the past in that anyone who occupies a territory imposes his social system upon it." Forty years later there is no question but that Stalin was right.

What mattered then in the occupied territories is what matters now. The three keys are absolute Kremlin control over relations between East and West, priority of Soviet inter-ests over those of sister countries and control f each country by the Communist Party.

There has always been some bending of the rules, even under Stalin. Churches in Poland and East Germany have maintained some influence, for example, and so have satellite non-Communist parties. "Parliaments" and "presidents" kept their roles, to provide the flusion of a certain amount of pluralism.

In the period between Khrushchev and Chernenko, the Kremlin began to understand that the rules would have to be bent some more and that this would be all to the good, since these additional deviations would serve only to help assure the stability of the three essential elements of control.

The Russians realize that stereotyped reacthe Russians realize that stereotyped reac-tions to individual oational phenomena are no longer possible. They can, of course, react the same way to imminent danger, as they did when they invaded Hungary in 1956 and Czechoslovakia in 1968. They have learned, though, to tolerate the occasional "ideological outrage," since it can act as a safety valve and help to prevent new "Polish situations" help to prevent new "Polish situations."

All the leaders of Eastern states agree that the essential thing is to hold on to power and to maintain that of the Communist Party. This is the nature of the regime — despotic, rife with opposism, but provisionally stable—that Stalin imposed on Romania. This is why the Kremlin has tolerated what it sees as the extravagant behavior of Nicolae Ceansescu, the untouchable president of that country. In Hungary, "peaceful coexistence within a framework of indifference," as the relationship between party and citizenry has been called, has enabled Janos Kadar to carry out his economic reforms and flirt with the West, televising the Los Angeles Games and tolerat-ing the presence in Hungary for a few days of correspondents from Radio Free Europe. And it was the certainty that General Woj-ciech Jaruzelski would manage the Pols-

problem without a very risky intervention by the Red Army that convinced the Kremlin to be patient during the 16 months when Solidarity broke every Communist taboo.

So it is normal for the Kremlin oot to ignore the sentiment that all Germans share of belonging to the same nation, and their wish to profit from that situation.

By letting Erich Honecker visit Bonn, the Kremlin would compensate somewhat for the

It is normal for Moscow not to ignore sentiment that all Germans share of belonging to one nation.

bumiliation the East Germans suffered Olympics. There is also the fact that the special status of East Germany is such that West Germany bears some of the economic burden of running the Soviet empire. What about the recent Prayda articles criticizing inter-German relations? Some observers have read them as a sign of the Kremlin's disapproval of Mr. Honecker. Others see evidence of a power struggle within the East German regime. Others diagnose physical fatigue in the Kremlin's old men. There may be some truth to these interpretations, but this is not the first such quarrel in the East.

As recently as last spring, the issue of priority of individual national interests over those of the "socialist family" gave rise to a press debate that pitted the Hungarian and East German media against those of Czechoslovakia and the Soviet Union.

Moreover, the Kremlin does not need Pravda to criticize Mr. Honecker. The Pravda articles were addressed not to him but rather to all those in East and West Germany who might be tempted to believe that the current differences could threaten what the Kremlin regards as its fundamental interests.

Pravda does not dictate diplomatic conduct to Mr. Honecker, Mr. Kadar or Mr. Ceausescu. It does point out limits to all those on both sides of the Iron Curtain whose hopes are exaggerated. The taboos remain. There is no deviation from the rules in the ruling caste.

Mr. Honecker is as German in 1984 as General Jaruzelski was Polish in 1981. For Moscow in 1984, European reality, and Ger-moscow in 1984, European reality, and German reality in particular, is division, not re-unification. It is wall, not bridge.

Analysts have been saying that Stalin is back in style. But with the Red Army in East Germany, in Poland and elsewhere, the Stalin style has been there all along. International Herald Tribune

Other Opinion

A German Test for the Kremlin

In the past, Moscow tacitly encouraged rapprochement between the two Germanys because, for one thing, the Kremlin thought it would fan neutralism in West Germany and disrupt the unity of NATO. Another reason was that the Soviet Union could obtain through East Germany the superior industrial products and technologies of Western Europe. Moscow has suddenly changed this policy. Why? It is probably because the rapprochement between the two Germanys has gone pevond what Moscow can tolerate.

The most surprising thing about recent developments is that East Germany, far from being cowed by Moscow's expressions of displeasure, has shown an attitude of defiance. Hungary has voiced support for the East Germans. Undeniably, the Soviet Union's influence over the countries of Eastern Europe has sunk low. How will the Kremlin handle the situation? It is an even greater test for the Soviet leadership than Poland.

- The Daily Yomiuri (Tokyo).

These accusations of "revanchism" entail a degree of risk for Moscow, for ecor : nie considerations and the need to hold the East bloc together mean that an open breach with East Germany must be avoided except as a last resort. The recent clear evidence of discord in Eastern Europe has tempted some people to exaggerated speculation that the Democratic Republic may be aiming at emancipation from the Soviet yoke. But nobody really knows how much latitude Moscow can afford to allow or. more important still, how far the Democratic Republic's rulers can go in that direction with-out undermining their own internal position. - Neue Zürcher Zeitung (Zurich).

These Women's Games Weren't Play

L OS ANGELES — The instant Joan Benoit burst from the entry tunnel into Los Angeles Memorial Coliscum on Aug. 5 — her cap brim cocked up, her legs pumping, her face stilled into the fierce concentration that had carried her over 26 miles — there were women in America who knew that for the rest of their lives they would never see another moment quite like this. Amy Rennert, editor of Women's Sports and Fitness Magazine, darted across the press box in tears and hugged one of her writers. Pat Connolly, a three-time Olympian pentathlete, watched on television and felt her throat close with emotion -"for Joan," she said later, still moved by the memory. "For women. For my daughter."

With 75,000 spectators on their feet to cheer her on, Benoit won the first women's marathon in Olympic history and ducked her head in delight as she sped into a victory lap. She was still hearing the cheers when Gabrielle Andersen Schiess, a Swiss runner, lorched in. Then Rennert turned away and Connolly began shouting at the television screen. "Hang oo," Connolly cried. "Finish! You can do it! Hang on!" If professionals bad scripted hausted Andersen-Schiess dragging gamely toward the finish like a wounded animal, women suddenly looked capable of taking oo nearly everything competitioo could demand, from breathtaking effort to almost unendurable pain. The suddenly celebrated faces of Benoit and Andersen-Schiess were only two of a collection without precedent in the Olympie Games. America was cheering Flora Hyman, the 30-year-old, 6-foot-5 volleyball player, and Cheryl Miller, the 6-foot-2 basketball forward. There was cyclist Connie Carpenter-Phinney, winning the gold in the first women's Olympie bicycle race. And gymnast Mary Lou Retton, winning the gold with routines of such ferocions strength that her coach declared afterward, "The butterfly's time is over. No more butterflies in gymnastics." The list of women's names goes on and on through diving, sprinting, swimming, shooting, even coaching and working as referee.

"It is remarkable," said Eva Auchincless, executive director of the Women's Sports Foundation, set up by women athletes 10 years ago to help promote sports opportuni-ties for women. "What amazes me -l suppose it shouldn't amaze me. bot it does - is how many people are zeroing in and noticing the women as much as the men

I have been so incredibly proud of these women and their perfor-mances that it brings tears to my eyes to even think of it."

The timing, for many women rushing home to their televisioo sets, was exhilarating. Women are storming national politics in America this summer; long-delayed bills addressing pension disparities and lapsed child-support payments are passing without opposition; Demo-crats and Republicans alike are furiously courting the women's vote, and just the sight of the new Democratic vice presidential nominee is stirring crowds across the country.

"My reaction was very similar to what I feit when Geraldine Ferraro was commuted," Rennert said, remembering the pride she felt when Benoit flung her arms up at the marathoo finish line. "It was really not a patriotic feeling. That was not it at all. It was just this sense of we really can do anything."
Pat Connolly said: "I got into Olympic Village one day, and [bas-

There is also a chance that these facilities will oever be used by anyone - that the United States is just throwing good money after bad.
The biggest problem down the road ... is that both the far left and far right believe Ronald Reagan, said a high U.S. official based in Central America. The far left at home and the Sandinists in Nicaragua think he's coming to get them. The far right around here thinks he's going to come in and save them at the last minute. I think we're playing minute. I think we're playing with both of them. "Our policy has never been sold to the American people. As more and more Americans begin to understand the situation bere ... they're oot going to come in and save the thugs and the thieves who created this situation. I'm depressed all the time thinking that one day we'll just up and leave everyone in their misery. But I think that's what's going to happen."

Finally, I asked Mr. Negroponte, who does not share that view, what he thought Honduras would be like in five years, "It depends," he said.
"This is a country that has always been very dependent on factors be-yond its own control."

In Defense of the 1960s Regarding two opinion columns on the Nixon presidency (Aug. 8 and 9) by Raymond K. Price Jr...

Mr. Price finds the 1960s to have been the "second most disastrous decade in U.S. history, following only the 1860s, ravaged by an actual civil war." The 1770s were pretty bad, too, for the government in power, yet what came forth was all right.

The 1860s war was necessary because a part of the nation was willing to break the nation apart in order to keep what it had. Yet from that terri-

Options Spreads Provide Strategy in Volatile Market

By H.J. MAIDENBERG

FUTURES AND OPTIONS

International Herald Tribune

EW YORK - Just before the stock market exploded two weeks ago, many pension fund and other institutional portfolio managers had been shifting out of cash and stocks and into bonds. They wanted to lock in the high yields on bonds. Besides, the stock market was dull, perhaps because they had been unloading equities for months.

When the stock market surged, however, many fund managers were able to quickly reverse course - without unloading bonds - thanks to spreading operations involving Treasury bond options, as well as by using the bond futures also traded on the Chicago Board of Trade.

While the use of bond futures to hedge positions in the fixed income securities market is old hat, options spreading is more practical for both bedging and, equally important to bond investors, profitably controlling the volatility fac-tor in this market.

Basically, a spread involves the simultaneous buying of equal amounts of calls and puts in the options market. Calls give investors the right to buy the underlying securities at a specified price within a fixed period of time. Puts are the right to sell them under the same conditions. The cost of the options, or rights, is termed the premium. In either case, investors need not exercise the rights if they become

But spreads are not just for hedgers, or those who can't make up their mind about which way the bond market will go," said Jack A. Barbanel, first vice president and director of futures and options trading at Gruntal & Co. "Spreads also can be used profitably by investors willing to take a stand in the market."

If, for example, the bond investor is bullish, Mr. Barbanel said, he could buy Treasury bond calls at a higher premium and sell calls at a lower price. Or he could buy puts with a lower premium, while selling puts with a higher premium.

Mr. Barbanel made up the following example of a "bull spread" that was predicated on December Treasury bond futures, upon which the options are based, trading at 75. Actually, December bond futures closed last Friday at 65 3/32 and the premium on the December 64 call was 2 22/32. The December 64 puts closed at 1 22/32.

UPPOSE in October the December Treasury bond call, with a strike price of 78, was trading at 24/64, each worth $15.63, and the premium for the option was $375, he said. Assume further that the bullish investor simultaneously sold a December 80 call at 8/64 and got the $125 premium. In this example, the difference between the $375 premium cost and the $125 premium income would be $250, which would be the maximum risk, plus transaction costs.

If in November, when the December bond options expire, bond futures are trading at 80, Mr. Barbanel added, "we can assume from past experience that the call premium would be worth $2,000, or 2 full points; the December 80 calls that were sold would be worthless because the person who bought wouldn't exercise a profidess option."

The profit on this operation would be $1,750, less transaction costs. In this example of a profitable bull spread, the risk-reward ratio was 7-10-1," he noted, "because the maximum risk was $250 and the maximum profit was $1,750. The breakeven point, based on bond futures, was 78.8/32.

Had bond prices fallen, the maximum loss on the spread would have been $250, the premium outlay on the 78 call, which would have been worthless at expiration. As for the 80 call that was sold, the buyer would exercise, and thus the $2,000 premium income

For bearish investors in this scenario, Mr. Barbanel offered the following strategy: Again suppose it is October and the December Treasury bond futures are trading at 78. A bearish investor would sell a December 74 call at, say, 4 14/64 a premium of, say, $4,219. At the same time, the investor could buy a December 76 call at 2 40/64 for a premium outlay of $2,625. The investor would be ahead $1,594 (the $4,219 premium he received, less the

Stauffer Settles With SEC

Company Sued Over Accounting

Reners
WASHINGTON — Staulier Chemical Co. on Monday settled a suit brought by the Securities and Exchange Commission in which the company was charged with overstating its 1982 earnings by $31.1 million.

The company settled the suit by agreeing to restate its financial re-ports for 1982 and 1983 and to refrain from violating federal secu-rities laws. Stauffer neither admitted nor denied the allegations.

The SEC complaint ebarged that the Westport, Connecticut-based concern increased its 1982 earnings by using accounting methods that were not generally accepted by the accounting industry.

The case grew out of a program in police the accounting practices of publicly traded companies during the 1982 recession.

The lawsuit said Stauffer improperly implemented a change in the way it accounted for its inven-tory, causing a material overstatement of $3.3 million in its 1982

In the fourth quarter of 1982. Stauffer prematurely recognized $72 million of revenoe from its ag-ricultural chemical "early order program," the lawsuit alleged, en-abling Stauffer to claim increased 1982 earnings of $26.7 million.

Finally, the suit charged. Stauffer's international division accepted certain shipments of inventories from the company's agricultural chemical division which were not based on firm customer orders, resulting in a $1.1-million overstatement of revenue.

In Westport, Stauffer said that its settlement with the SEC would cut earnings by a total $2.8 million, or seven cents a share, for 1982 and 1983, representing an overall decline of less than 3 percent. The company said the main effect of the change would be to shift earnings from 1982 to 1983. Stauffer, which is to reissue is

France's Louis Vuitton Expands By Controlling Luggage Retailing

PARIS - Seven years ago, Louis Vuitton SA was a quiet, family-owned company known mainly for its distinctively monogrammed trunks, suitcases and leather handbags. It had only two stores and about $17.5 million a year in sales.

Since then, a burst of sustained growth has established the 130-year-old company as a rising star of international retailing. When Louis Viritton went public on the Bourse in June, eager investors snapped up more than one million of its shares. Demand was so intense, with 100,000 bids for each share offered, that the price quickly rose in the first few days to 525 francs ($60) from 465 francs as the

Given the company's impressive record, analysts say, the stock's performance so far has not been particularly spectacular. Over the past few years, Louis Vuitton has opened about 60 retail stores around the world, with sales growing at a 35-percent annual rate. Last year the company earned 135.94 million francs, up from 1982's 92.68 million francs, on sales of 829.2 million francs.

The company's growth dates from 1977, when a small group of executives led by Louis Vuitton's chief executive officer, Henry Racamier, 71, set about turning the private company into an aggres-

France's GDP Fell in Quarter; Base Rates Cut

PARIS - The French economy, after expanding strongly at the start of the year, shrank in the second quarter for the first time since 1982 as industrial production fell and imports rose, the National Sta-tistics Institute said Monday.

Industry received some cheer, Monday that some French banks are cutting their base lending rates. the rate they charge their most fa-vored customers, to 12 percent from 12.25 percent, effective Tues-

The gross domestic product, or GDP, the widest measure of economic performance, slipped 0.3 percent in the second quarter after revised 0.9 percent first-quarter rise, up from a previously estimated 0.7 percent.

However the trend over the first six months taken as a whole remained positive, the institute add-

The government has been urging industry to invest in more modern equipment, a plea that appears to be having some impact: The figures show that the higher imports are due mainly to purchases by industry of capital goods.

The institute predicted last month that GDP growth over the whole of this year would be 1.4 percent, based on 1970 prices, dou-ble last year's 0.7 percent growth. Banque Nationale de Paris, Socièté Générale and the Crédit Industriel & Commercial banking group all said they would cut their rates, but a spokesman for Credit Lyonnais said it had not yet decided whether to follow.

The base rate cut was the first by state-owned French banks since January last year, and followed three cuts in the Bank of France's money market intervention rate since early May as well as a base rate cut to 12 percent by Chase Manhattan Bank's French subsidiary last month.

The cut followed a one-percentage-point reduction in British base rates last week, which came even though the dollar and U.S. interest rates remain firm.

News of the cut had little effect on the French franc, which was quoted at around 8.93 francs to the dollar in late Paris trading, close to its record low of 8.98 reached in New York last week.

The French Finance Ministry also announced Monday that it is cutting government-controlled interest rates on most savings plans and Treasury bills by one percentage point to 6.5 percent effective Thursday, the first such cut since last August.

The interest rate on 18-month Treasury bills fell at Monday's Bank of France tender to 11 and 35/64 percent, from 11 and 58/64 percent July 18, money market sources said.

U.S. Steelmakers Assail Subsidies

By Paul Lewis
New York Times Service

BELLAGIO, Italy -The debate in the United States over foreign steel subsidies is beginning to center on one theme: that existing trade laws have failed to bring order to the steel market.

Neither recent U.S. legislation nor the General Agreement on Tar-iffs and Trade's 1980 code of conduct on subsidies has been able to bring about a lessening of tensions, steel experts say.

"It is ironic that world steel trade today is probably more encum-bered by nontarili barriers than ever, and more restraints are on the way," Charles O. Verril Jr., a trade lawyer with the Washington law firm Patton, Bloggs & Blow, said in a study presented at a recent meet-ing in Bellagio, a lakeside resort.

At the meeting, U.S. representa-tives presented themselves as innocent victims of a worldwide conspiracy by foreign governments and their steel companies to flood the U.S. market with cheap subsidized steel.

The foreign producers accused the U.S. industry of being badly managed and slow to adapt to a changing world where steel do-mand is dwindling, government in-volvement in industry is growing and new producers enjoy a competitive edge over older ones.

The conference was organized by the Washington-based International Law Institute, a research center specializing in trade and invest-ment law. Lawyers are becoming more and more involved in steel, explained Professor Don Wallace Jr., the institute's director.

Over the past 20 years, U.S. steelmakers have watched the foreign share of their home market climb steadily from about 6 percent to 25 percent. And they are con-

European producers, many of whom are openly subsidized by their governments, have agreed to limit their share of the U.S. market to 6 percent rather than face new legal restrictions. Japan, Mexico, South Africa, Brazil and Canada have also accepted export limits. But U.S. imports still rise and U.S. producers see secret subsidies wherever they look

> When In Tack Kim, executive vice president of South Korea's Po-hang Iron & Steel Co., said his partly state-owned company skipped dividends to finance new plant construction, and shopped around for subsidized credit from Western suppliers, the Americans cried foul

When Mario Costa Braga, development director of Brazil's Sider-bras-Siderurgia, noted that his country had to export steel to repay debts that the industry incurred in buying U.S. steelmaking technol-ogy, U.S. steel executives said this showed that Brazil would sell at any price.

The fact that many steel plants in developing countries are government-owned was frequently cited as evidence that they trade unfairly and should be penalized. In the U.S. industry's view, even countries with high import tariffs subsidize new quotas on all imports.

"You block one product and the In Profit merchants get someone else to take a crack at the market, so you have to start again." complained Bethle-bern Steel's general counsel, Laird Pattersen. "We face a range of uncompetitive practices present trade laws do not counter effectively." That charge is becoming the crux of the debate over foreign subsidies

At 3 P.M.: Trading Is Very Light

NEW YORK - The stock market drifted lower late Monday afternoon in extremely slow trading as investors took a break from the summer rally.

The Dow Jones industrial average, down 9 at midday after falling 5.96 Friday, was down 1.66 to 1.216.43 an hour before the close. The Dow, which gained 16.01 last week, had climbed 131 points, or 12 percent, in less than three weeks after bitting a 17-month low on July 24.

Declines led advances about 9 to 5. The fivehour turnover was 62.5 million shares, down sharply from 159.4 million in the corresponding period Friday.

Analysts said that, coosidering the performance of the past 13 sessions, it was not surpris-ing that the market paused to reflect. Most were optimistic that the rally would resume soon.

"The market is tremendously overbought and due for a pause," said Jerome Hinkle of Sanford C. Bernatein. "There is nothing surprising about what is happening right now." He cited a "wait-and-see attitude" that "could last the rest of this week and into the first part of next week." He added, "The Dow Jones average abould find support in the 1,160

International Control of the Control

From The International Herald Tribune 1887-1980

On every page of this documentary book, you'll feel the urgency of great historical news stories as if they were breaking today.

Reproductions of 129 front pages, many with Herald Tribune exclusive articles: like the firsthand report from the sinking Titanic by a Tribune reporter who was aboard, the Dreyfus trial, the Venice campanile caught in mid-collapse by a Tribune photographer!

Follow coverage of the First World War by one of the few newspapers that stayed in Paris and was virtually edited at the front. Read about people — Queen Victoria, Lindbergh, Jack the Ripper, the Windsors, Stalin — a century of news headliners and the events that surrouoded them. Hard cover, 28 x 38 ceotimeters, readable-size text. The book is divided into five chronological sections, each with an introduction describing the period from historical and journalistic viewpoints. THE FRONT PAGE is a distinctive personal or business gift. Order one - or several - today.

Tate's Bid for Brooke Bond Greeted Skeptically

LONDON - Sugar and tea may he natural companions in the typical British parlor, but mixing them in the City of London is proving to be another matter.

Nearly three weeks ago, Tate & Lyle PLC, Britain's largest sugar refiner, announced an unexpected offer to take over Brooke Bond Group PLC, the world's largest tea producer. Since then, the value of the bid, which is in cash and shares, has risen to the equivalent of about $420 million, from about $390 million, thanks to a rise in Tate's share price on the London Stock Ex-

Analysts immediately suggested that Tate was waiting to see whether it would need to release the figures in any effort to defend itself in a takeover threat. Sir John attributed the bid to "Tate's own problems" rather than commercial logic.

Tate, for its part, contends that Brooke Bond would be an "ideal partner." In its official statement announcing the bid, Tate said, The acquisition would represent a significant and exciting step to-wards the creation of a large international food group with strong market positions and efficient, lowcost production."

German Banks Protest to Bonn Over Tax Raids

FRANKFURT -- West German banks have protested to the federal and state finance and justice ministries over a series of raids by tax investigators, saying they threaten the principle of bank secrecy.

In a letter dated July 24, the Central Credit Committee. which groups representatives of West Germany's major bank associations, said the raids have not only aroused considerable doubt over the legal procedures used by investigating authorities, but could jeopardize the basis of trust between banks and their customers."

A copy of the letter was made available Monday by Rudiger Philipowski, head of the tax department of the German Cooperative Bank Association, which currently heads the com-mittee. He said in Bonn that raids could jeopardize bank secrecy. "We want to fire a warning shot," be added.

The complaint was triggered by a raid on a branch of Deutsche Bank in Düsseldorf on July 1, when eight tax investigators from the state of North Rhine-Westphalia briefly closed the bank to question employees and search bank records on customers.

People Express's Aim: Explosive Expansion

By Daniel F. Cuff New York Times Service

NEWARK, New Jersey - People Express Airlines is growing like a gawky teen-ager, bursting its seams. Overflowing its base in the old North Terminal of Newark International Airport, it is filling the skies with its planes.

That growth accelerated last week as the low-fare airline announced plans to extend its bus line in the sky with five round-trip flights a day to Chicago. That challenges the giant airlines United and American, which each bave 24 round-trip flights a day between Chicago and the New York area.

There were immediate forecasts airport. of minous fare wars for the airline industry. The People Express fares — 579 from 7 A.M. to 7 P.M. Monday through Friday and $59 at other hours - were about 70 percent below coach fares on the full-service airlines. And the risk to People Express, taking on the established major lines, was evident. Analysis recalled other carriers whose swift growth overtook them; Braniff, Laker, Air Florida.

These failures, however, have given no pause to Donald C. Burr, the chief executive officer and founder of People Express. His phi-losophy is growth, and he wants eventually to put People Express planes in the skies the way McDonald's puts restaurants on the roads.

The airline expects delivery of 24 more planes by spring. That will give it 76 aircraft.

People Express's formula of lowcost operations, in which extra charges are levied for such amenities as ehecked baggage and meals, allows profits on fares as low as one-third those ebarged by other airlines. But until now its success has come on peripheral routes where much of the competition is from small airlines.

People Express intensified the game when it began international service to London last year. Now it has added domestic service from as Los Angeles, Houston and Min-earlier period.

neapolis-St. Paul, and on Aug. 22 it will begin the Chicago service.

"It does represent a change in strategy," said Alfred Norlin, an analyst at Kidder Peabody. "They had said they would try to avoid the head-to-head competition as much as they could, But considering the amount of airplanes they have bought, it's pretty clear they had to have that kind of expansion."

The move to Chicago was no surprise within the industry, said Robert Joedicke of Lehman Brothers Kuhn Loch, It was known that People Express had obtained landing right slots at Chicago's O'Hare

"What will happen has happened in many People Express markets, said an airline consultant who asked that his name not be "The total market is so stimulated by their low fares that. . . evervbody benefits.

American Airlines then announced that it, too, would match People's fares, with some restrictions. In addition, it decided to undercut United on flights to La Guardia, Kennedy and Islip.

People Express's low fares tap a market of new passengers. "They have taken people off the roads and out of buses." Mr. Norlin said. "They generate traffic."

But People Express's profits so far this year have not matched its performance in the first half of 1983. Net income in the first six months was $3.8 million, or 15 cents a share, compared with $6.3 Newark to such major destinations million, or 37 cents a share, in the

Another Year of Growth and Development.

The Daimler-Benz balance sheet for 1983 shows, as in previous years, satisfactory results.

Worldwide sales rose by more than DM 1 billion to more than DM 40 billion. We thus maintained the upward trend of past years.

With a growth rate of more than 12 per cent, passenger cars accounted for the lion's share of the sales increase. The S-class models set a new record, thus emphasizing our leadership in the field of sophisticated automobiles.

The 190: New Market Potential.

The 190 class has been a success right from the beginning. Production limitations restricted the number of 190's available during the start-up period as demand outstripped supply. This was also true in the case of our other two passenger car model lines.

One especially encouraging aspect of the 1983 passenger car year was the large number of new owners attracted to Mercedes by the dynamic 190 series. We view the enormous positive response created by this series – which includes the brand-new 190 E 2.3–16 – as an important base for future growth.

Full-Line Producer of Commercial Vehicles.

By way of contrast, the commercial vehicle sector had to contend with deteriorating market conditions. Even the strong upswing in the German domestic market failed to compensate for the decline in export sales, particularly to the Near and Middle East. Despite this, Daimler-Benz was the only manufacturer of commercial vehicles able to avoid layoffs and short-time work in 1983. With a product line featuring our new light trucks, which range from 6.5 to 11 tons GVW, we expect to continue our leadership.

Daimler-Benz is the world's largest manufacturer of trucks over 6 tons GVW, and our product line, backed by our research and development work, our production technology and our sales organization, is expected to keep us in a competitive position in the international marketplace.

Our 1983 balance sheet is not only an account of positive development, but is also an expression of foresight and provision for the future.

During the past year we invested DM 3.5 billion in product development and manufacturing facilities. We spent another DM 1.5 billion on research and development with an eye toward further improvement of our position as a technologically sophisticated auto manufacturer.

Although our industry is facing major challenges, these will not impair the future prospects for the motor car. This is particularly true for Mercedes-Benz vehicles, which have almost 100 years of tradition behind them.

We view our 1983 balance sheet as an important milestone on our road to the future.

105.00 S. African Miners To Discuss Strike

Reuters JOHANNESBURG — Gold mine workers and mine owners in South Africa are still deadlocked over wages, union and mine officials said Monday. The dispute is in its second month, and the miners now have the right to strike.

Cyril Ramaphosa, general score-tary of the National Union of Mineworkers, representing black miners, said that the union planned to discuss taking a strike vote now that the mandatory one-month cooling-off period has expired.

The union, which says it has 70,000 members, is demanding a raise in excess of the increases—between 13.3 and 14.4 percent— Reuers

PANAMA ODYSSEY

By William J. Jorden. 746 pp. $24.50. University of Texas Press, Box 7819, Austin, Texas

Reviewed by Bernard Gwertzman

R EMEMBER the Panama Canal treaties of 1978 and the bitter debates on whether the United States should "return" the canal to Panama? It is only a few years since the treaties went into effect, but they have already passed into oblivion. Ronald Reagan, who bitterly assailed Presidents Ford and Carter for their advocacy of the treaties, has said and done nothing about them since taking office.

In fact, Reagan warmly welcomed the president-elect of Panama, Nicolás Ardito Barletta, to the White House. As the Reagan adminis-tration struggles with its Central American policy, the solid relations between the United States and Panama, one of the side benefits of the treaties, are a major source of sansfaction to the administration. Imagine the administra-tion's problems, if in addition to El Salvador and Nicaragua, it also had to worry about protecting the Panama Canal against a hostile Panama.

William J. Jorden, a former correspondent for The New York Times, worked as a special assistant to President Johnson, who first tried to negotiate a new Panama Canal treaty in 1964. He was hired by Henry A. Kissinger as his Latin American adviser on the National Security Council in 1972, and was named by President Nixon as ambassador to Panama in 1974. He was kept on by Carter in 1977 and helped shepherd the treaties through Congress. This first-hand experience at the center of the negotiations with Ambassadors Elisworth Bunker and Sol M. Linowitz allowed Jorden to Bunker and Sol M. Linowitz allowed Jorden to write a massive, Kissingerian memoir-history of the Panama Canal negotiations from 1964 to 1979. Jorden's book not only provides rich material on the events he witnessed first-hand from his vantage point in the White House and later in Panama, but also on the behind-thescenes activity from which he was excluded, such as the strategy sessions held by Omar

Like Kissinger's two volumes about his days in the Nixon White House (a third volume on the Ford White House is still to come), Jorden has woven personal anecdote, documentation and revealing detail into a highly readable, more-Ihan-you-may-want-to-know book about the Panama treaties. For aficionados of diplomatic reporting, however, this is the "sleeper" book of the year, which gives the reader one of the rare opportunities to be invited into a crucial set of negotiations. But more than that, it also goes into exhaustive detail on the bureaucratic maneuvering in Washington, showing how the Defense and State departments interact on something like the canal treaties, in which the Pentagon's inherent desire to retain its control over the canal and the State Department's desire to avoid trouble in Latin America, initially. clashed, but then were resolved when the Joint Chiefs of Staff concluded that it would not be worth the cost to have to delend the canal against an angry Panamanian population if the treaties were not signed. One of the more intriguing aspects of this book is its ability to penetrate the thinking and activities of the Panamanians. Most diplomatic memoirs reveal only a minimum of what the other side was up to. For instance, the spate of books dealing with the Russians can only guess, generally, at Soviel monvations. Who knows what Andrei A. Gromyko and Leonid I. Brezhnev talked about in preparing the way for the strategic arms agreements, for instance.

But the Panamanians, many educated in the United States, apparently decided that they wanted Jorden's book to be the definitive one on what obviously was the most important set of negotiations in Panama's history. Jorden acknowledged that the doors were open to him from Torrijos down. Thus, Iorden is like a former battlefield commander going back after the war to interview his opposing generals and finding out what their battle plans were at the

There were many strange and unusual turns in the Panama negotiations, to part because of the sensitivity of the issues to the two coeffi-tries. Jorden is lavish in his praise of Johnson and Carter for their efforts on behalf of the treaties, with Carter receiving special praise for his decision to make the canal treaty the priority foreign-policy goal in his first months in

He provides details on why Ellsworth Bunker is considered the premier U.S. oegotiator of the century, and he has taken the time to give play-by-play accounts of the problems faced and surmounted by the State Department and Panamanian lawyers. Jorden could probably have used a good editor to cut away excess anecdote and detail. But he clearly was determined to get everything he knew about Panama and the negotiations into the account, and for those who want to re-create what it was like in the negotiating room, this is the ideal book.

LOS ANGELES - Greg Louganis, considered the greatest diver of all time, led a final record-breaking gold rush Sunday as the United States became the most successful team in Olympic history. Continu-ing their domination of the Games until the final hours, when the finish of the men's marathon was part of the closing ceremonies, the Americans surpassed the record of 80 gold medals achieved by the Soviet Union in 1980. Louganis touched off the last day of the 23d Summer Olympics by adding the platform champion-ship to the springboard title he won earlier, and soon U.S. rider Joe Fargis and synchronized swimmer Tracie Ruiz had also won their second golds.

The marathon, the 229th medal event of the Games, went to Carlos Lopes of Portugal, who covered the 26-mile-385-yard (42.193-kilomeer) course in Olympic-record time. Louganis's platform victory came with a total of 710.91 points, improving on the mark of 687.90 he et last year, and the triumphs by equestrian Fargis in individual jumping and Ruiz in solo synchro-nized swimming brought the U.S. gold-medal total to 83.

Bruce Kimball took the silver in diving and Conrad Homfeld the equestrian silver, giving the United States five more medals for the day and a total of 174.

West Germany finished with a total of 59 medals (17 of them golds), and Romania with 20 golds and 53 medals in all. Louganis, who wiped away tears

But when the first pizza parlor in Moscow opened in February 1980 oo Gorki Street, the city's busiest shopping thoroughfare, restaurantgoers had a new option.

Since then, the Rome-based company Italtrade has signed a $40,000 contract with the Soviet Ministry of Foreign Trade to supply, for 10 parlors, pizza ovens, chines to make pizza pans, dough kneaders and a course in pizza-making by an Italian chef. Several Yugoslavian and Finnish companies have opened others.

Despite their popularity, Mos-cow's pizza parlors suffer the same kinds of shortages other restaurants do and have trouble finding the necessary pizza ingredients, according to Maria Torrieri, spokeswoman for Italirade.

The shortages have produced some odd combinations, prompt-ing one Italian resident of Moscow to comment, "There really isn't much Italian left in these pizzas."

Because mozzarella cheese is not available, Soviet pizzas are made with sulgum cheese, a semi-soft white cheese from the southern republic of Georgia.

Zubin Mehta Talks About His Links to India, Israel

By Harold C. Schonberg New York Times Service

TEW YORK — Some years Nago Zubin Mehta was quoted as saying that he would never conduct any orchestras in India or Russia, countries hostile to Israel Now he is taking the New York. Philharmonic on a tour of the Far East, partly sponsored by Citibank, that will begin Wednesday in Tokyo and culminate with five concerts in Delhi, Calcutta and Bombay, ending Sept. 19. Inconsistency? Chaoge of heart? Mehta has been known to say things in the heat of the momeot and then retract them. When he was music director of the Los Angeles Philharmonic he had some nasty words to say about the musicians of the New York Philharmonic, in effect charging them with being a spoiled bunch of prima donnas. nowhere near as good a group as his. He would not marry the Philharmonic if it was the last orchestra on earth. Some years later he stood before them, an invited guest. He apologized handsomely —handsomely enough to become its leader not long after that.

[The Philharmonic on Friday canceled two performances in Malaysia because of the govern-ment's request that Ernest Bloch's Schelomo, a Hebrew Rhapsody for Cello and Orchestra' dropped from the program. The orchestra agreed Wednesday not to play "Schelomo," but changed its mind after outrage was voiced by U.S. Jewish organizations and government officials. "Schelomo" will be played at the other stops, including the cities in India.]

Recently Mehta, spoke about India, Israel, music and politics. He was excited about the trip. Born in Bomhay 48 years ago, Mehta left when he was 18 to study in Vienna. It was not until 1967 that he returned, as conductor of the touring Los Angeles Philharmonic. Since then he has visited India several times with his family.

He popped off about India in 1978, over disagreements between him and the Indian government about a tour with the Israel Philharmonic, of which he is lifetime orchestra on tour. He finds in conductor. At that time he angrily Israel a people whose beliefs are said that he would never conduct close to those he learned as a in India until it recognized Israel. Parsee.

Now he has calmed down a bit. "I can't hold the New York Philharmonic responsible for my statements," he said, "And when it came down to it, I could not conceive of an Asiatic tour without going to my own country."

Mehta's roots in Indian life and culture run deep. He described the forthcoming visit as "more oationalistic than religious, gue with the Israelis." though I am religious. My temples are only in India. When I am in India I go to the religious ceremonies. I am a Parsee, and we are brought up to practice the symbols. Our religion goes back to Zoroaster 4,000 years ago. He taught the difference between right and wrong, and it became the religion of the Persian em-

I love India," he said, "and it is important for my spirit to go back. I feel I belong so much. When I land in Bombay it's like I never left. I never even changed my passport, though I could have become a Swiss citizen some years ago. Today there are about only 90,000 Parsees in the world. We are dwindling."

Aside from his spiritual involvement, there is another reasoo that Mehta is eager to conduct in India. He wants to bring Western music there. India. unlike Japan or even the resurgent China, is oot a country that has not shown much interest in Western classical music. It has few orchestras and has not produced instrumentalists or singers who figure in the international scene. But of one thing Mehta is positive, and that is the response of the Indian public to the music he is going to bring. He believes that Indians will respond to Beetho-ven, Wagner, Bach and the other composers he will be conducting.

For many years Mehta has been much more allied professionally to Israel than to his native country. The lifetime conductor of the Israel Philharmonic, he spends several month each year any major orchestra, contains 30 his scores. He has very few plat-there and is constantly taking the or 40 players who think they can form mannerisms — certainly

"I first visited Israel in 1961, and I felt so much at home," he said. "It even looked like home. The people reminded me of my own people. They are like Parsees. They, like us, have kept a racial identity. Israel is my country, almost. I am so much a native there that I can be very critical. When I disagree with Israeli politics I ar-

Mehta's contract with the New York Philharmonic had been extended to 1990. He has now been with the orchestra for seven years and has not been receiving a uniformly favorable press. It should be added that few Philharmonic conductors in recent decades have received a favorable New York press. Mehta's predecessor, Pierre Boulez, had a hard time of it. Before Boulez, Leonard Bernstein was the favorite whipping boy of the New York critics, who felt that the Bernstein ego was getting in the way of his music. And so back to Dimitri Mitropoulos and, in the 1930s, John Barbirolli.

Nobody, in or out of the New York Philharmonic, disputes Mehta's professionalism. But in many critical circles there is a feeling that he is more concerned with color and effect than with substance; that he can be inconsistent; that his strength is mainly in the big Romantic showpieces rather than in Beethoven and his predecessors.

Nor bave the Philharmonic players wholeheartedly accepted him. They like him well enough as a person. They admire his clear beat and general technique. He does have his supporters. But there are also those who feel that he is oot particularly inspiring musically. Of course, it can also be said that the Philharmonic, like rather superficial musician," says one respected figure who prefers, to remain asonymous. "But the man is a real pro. And he is genu-inely interested in the orchestra. Other conductors give the impression that they are interested only in their own careers. Mehta is committed. He has the ears of his players; he personally attends all anditions when there is a vacancy in the orchestra; he works well with management. He is a good man for the orchestra."

Mehta shrugs his shoulders at criticism. He insists that honest criticism never bothers him. What he does not like is snobbishness in criticism. He thinks that too many critics are too eager to parade their knowledge, and he has little respect for that type. He knows, with mingled unitation and amusement, that many regard him as a glamour-boy conductor, and he cannot figure out why. He considers himself a serious musician who has mastered.

Taylor Makes Brief Visit To Burton's Grave Site

Elizabeth Taylor paid a visit Monday to the grave of Richard Burton, the Weish-born actor who married her twice and once said he would always love her. Taylor spent about 10 minutes in front of. the grave in Celigny, Switzerland. where Burton was buried Thursday. He died Aug. 5 of a brain hemorrhage. The actress appeared at the village cemetery at dawn. At her side, was a young woman who pleaded with reporters for "decency, decency, let her be alone in peace." Four men accompanying them used large umbrellas to shield Taylor from a few photographers. When the party walked back to a chauffeured Mercedes that had brought her, the escorts scooped up dirt and rock and threw it at the press, witnesses said. At the request of Burton's family, Taylor stayed away from the funeral services from a memorial service S in Pootrhydyfen, south Weler where he was born... Buffon's widow, Sally Hay, said Menday that she will remember him moves somebody who loved the witten word. "Although my life w ard was brief it was of managing quality," she said in a stational issued to the British domesticate agency, Press Association, Sic married Burton 13 months before his death. Edward Fox, who gained fame in "The Day of the Jackal," will take over the role written for Burton in "Wild Gesse II." the distributors have announced. Fox, who has also been in "A Bridge Too Far" and "Gandhi," will join the director, Peter Hunt, and the cast on location in Berlin

The hopes of former Miss America Vanessa Williams to sing to Jo-seph Psup's coming production of "La Bohème" in New York have hit a sour note. "She apparently has some commitments that just don't jibe with our project." Merle De-buskey, a spokesman, said, Williams, who relinquished her crown last-month after Penthouse magazine published sexually explicit photos of her, had auditioned for the part of Musetta. Papp said after the audition that "she has a very nice voice." Williams is to appear in an episode of NBC's "Partners in Crime" and has been offered a guest role on ABC's "The Fail Guy."
